FRIDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 24, 1865.

Peace Missions.

All the peace rumors culminated the other day when Davis sent Stephens and Hunter in the name of peace to Washington. Southern sentiment had become much inclined towards the olive branch, if one could only be found capable of working out their salvation. Something as the doves left the Ark and went wandering over the face of the earth, so these two Confederate worthies started from Richmond, which place will hardly be considered as safe a refuge from coming storms, as was the Ark of old Noah from the deluge that overwhelmed the world. Unlike the trembling messenger of Noah, they found no olive branch to carry back as the hopeful sign of a receding of the troubled waters, and an indication of coming rest in peace.

Peace upon any basis other than submission is now utterly exploded. The chivalry are not ready to submit while Bragg can harangue his troops by moonlight about the "last ditch" and one more blow for chivalry. As far as peace is concerned, the mission of Hunter and Stephens is a failure, though no doubt the Southern mind is greeted by a more subdued despair, and the clamorers of the restless mob that always longs for change, and is now besieging the dictatorial powers at Richmond, for some measure of relief, will be stifled for awhile, because, though intended merely for a ruse, the mission had the appearance of experiment, and certainly proved a failure.

The figure that our President and Secretary of State cut in the programme is hardly perceivable at this distance; they seem to have improved the occasion to sail down to Fortress Monroe; to have met the confederate guests in person and, talked over the questions of the day. That they treated with them officially there is no reason to suppose, or that they recognized them in any degree as the ministers or agents of the rebellion; no doubt they met them as Davis and Memminger met Jacques and Gilmore, and later, Blair and Singleton, and conversed freely and plainly upon all the points involved in the terrible contest that absorbs the Nation. At least the fact has this advantage. Such diplomacy entails no doubt, and engenders no suspicion; the plain spoken arguments of minds that differ, carry either conviction of success or certainty of failure. Going back to Richmond, these two men carry back to their misguided fellow rebels the wholesome confirmation of a political dogma they hoped to set aside, "there is no peace but in submission," and whatever ruse may have been intended, all the points gained by subterfuge are lost in comparison with the weight of words had from the two great men at the head of the Nation, carry with them a certainty as inevitable as the march of time, and the fall of Southern cities.

Meanwhile we have peace messages to chronicle day by day, that endorse the points made by Lincoln and Seward. The avenging armies preach peace most triumphantly under Sherman. Savannah has already caught the tone and learned the benefits of the lesson. Her citizens incline their hearts to peace, and Georgia, following the example set by her chief commercial mart, is holding peace meetings and talking of once more claiming her place in the Union. As messengers of this true gospel of peace, Sherman and his legions are marching northward. Branchville, Augusta, Columbia and Charleston have been pacified, and the latter place has lived to see the last Confederate flag mock the sky with its pretence of power and nationality. This all has the genuine flavor of permanent peace, based on the power and progress of the national arms. May it come soon, but, sooner or later, let it come, and be appreciated when it arrives. While we demand unconditional submission, we believe in afterwards extending all the consideration to these misguided rebels that they can consistently ask, or that a nation can consistently grant.

CHARLESTON.—If there is any one fact more than another that is matter of congratulation in connection with the successes achieved by Sherman, it is that the national flag once more floats from Fort Sumter, and that Charleston, the hotbed of treason, once more owns Federal rule. Truly, the devoted city had suffered enough to almost entitle it to absolution for its sin; nest of rebels, though it is, and cradle of secession, though it ever was, it would seem as if the midnight screech of the Swamp Angel, the bursting of shells charged with Greek fire in its almost deserted streets, had, for eighteen months, almost to a day, inflicted all the judgment we could doom her citizens to encounter, to expiate the sin of their treason. Ily as that must have been relished, we have little doubt that they greeted the shells that devastated the business portion of the town, and rendered it, tenantless and uninhabitable, with more satisfaction than they extended to the American flag last Saturday, when it swung to the breeze for the first time since it was lowered after Sumter fell. The band played Yankee Doodle then as, Anderson, gathering the remnant of his devoted band around him, lowered it respectfully as he left the fort to become a rebel stronghold. No doubt the gleeful notes of fife and drum broke on the ear of many Charlestonians last Saturday, as to the merry, marching strains of Yankee Doodle the Yankee forces, so hated and despised, made their way into Charleston, and flaunted their torn battle flags through the streets.

At last, Sumter has been avenged, the mass of ruins that remains to it—the dismantled fort and dismantled batteries—shall be replaced, never more to be insulted by the armed presence of the rebel of to-day.

CASCADE MOUNTAIN ROAD.—We see by the Albany Journal that an effort was being made to complete the work on the Willamette Valley and Cascade Mountain Wagon Road, and a public meeting held to urge the matter on. The Journal says:

> This road has been surveyed and a trail cut through the mountains to the Deschutes river, and about fifteen miles of the west end of the road has been made passable for wagons. A complete map has been made out, showing the distances from one station to another throughout the route. The course of the road, after entering the mountains, is almost due east, and in no place does it vary more than one mile from a direct line through the whole distance from where it leaves the valley until it reaches the Deschutes river. Every person who has been through on the route agrees in declaring it the best mountain road that has yet been discovered through the Cascade range. We regard this as a most important enterprise, and are pleased to learn that stock to the amount of $2,500 was taken by the merchants and men of capital in Albany. Work on the road will be commenced as soon as the weather will permit and it is confidently stated by Mr. A. Hackleman, Mr. Elkins and others, who have the best means of estimating the amount of labor required that the road will be made passable for wagons by midsummer.
> We do not gather from the Journal's remarks whether this is the road leading by the Santiam lodges or not; we suppose that it is, as some 15 miles of that was completed last fall, and the Company incorporated to put the road through to the Deschutes river. We are inclined to think so, as that route lays through Linn county.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—During a recent debate in the Senate, the Hon. Mr. Sumner stated that it transpired that the last vessel of the Valley of Virginia, which had in former years been always secured, last year fell into our hands, and that this was the result of calling into the ranks the details for guard duty, &c. It also appears that thousands of soldiers families have no animal meat for the last six months, and are living on a short supply of bread alone, and that the soldiers themselves have also been without meat for a long time.

Increase of Rebel Desertery.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Information from the Army of the Potomac to-day to evening reports all quiet.

Deserters are constantly coming in, and are more numerous than they have been for a long time. They have averaged over two hundred a day for the past week. Among them were several officers.

The utmost dissatisfaction prevails in the rebel ranks since the last fight. They seem determined to keep the field no longer, as they say they can never gain their independence, and see no reason why they should remain and be killed.

Desertion is so general now that other lines that Lee has issued an order for the arrest of every man found half a mile away from [illegible]

CITY.

Money Market.

San Francisco Bulletin of the 8th inst. says:

FASHION STABLES.—Mr. Edmund Tennett has given very handsome and substantial appearance to the corner of Mission and Second streets, which he has altered and improved. Mr. Tennett's stables have been well known as one of the best establishments of the kind in the city, and the fashionable patronage which they have received in the past will undoubtedly be continued in the future. The new stables are admirably adapted to the business, and will be conducted in the same excellent manner which has characterized the management of Mr. Tennett in the past. We are glad to see that the old stables have been retained, as they have become a landmark to many persons who have been in the habit of visiting them for years past. The new stables will be opened for the reception of horses on Monday next.

SATISFYING A JUDGMENT.—Sheriff Soule has been called upon to perform the disagreeable task of levying upon a large and complete assortment of fashionable groceries, liquors, etc., etc., at the corner of Third and Washington streets, yesterday, to satisfy a judgment brought against D. B. Wren an individual who had recently started in business at that corner, and who was reported to be insolvent. It could not be ascertained that he had procured his assortment upon credit, and that to which he was indebted had become impatient for some return, and notwithstanding the goods were in sight, each time Wren was called upon for money, he still persisted in his attempt to "keep a store." The law however finally took hold of the matter, and the hard deserts as usual. Yesterday when the sale commenced the utmost enthusiasm was manifested at finding that the barrels of sugar were sadly wanting, each containing but a few pounds sprinkled over a false bottom near the upper end. The buns of vegetables were in like in the same ratio, and empty boxes generally composed the stock. Of course Wren was not there to pass over his unfortunate case. He is put to the test, with the sympathy of a discriminating public in his behalf.

THE OREGON MEDICAL COLLEGE.—At a meeting of the Trustees of the Willamette University on the 16th, a Medical Department was organized to be located in Portland, and to be called The Oregon Medical College. The following gentlemen were elected Professors: Hon. M. P. Deady, Professor of Medical Jurisprudence; R. Glisan, M. D., of Theory and Practice of Medicine; J. A. Chapman, M. D., of Civil and Military Surgery; R. B. Wilson, M. D., of Obstetrics and Diseases of women and children; A. M. Loryea, M. D., of Anatomy; J. R. Cardwell, of Chemistry; Wm. H. Watkins, M. D., of Physiology and Institutes of Medicine; A. C. Gibbs, of Medical Jurisprudence. The faculty of the Medical College met on Wednesday evening, accepted the trust reposed in them, and organized by electing A. C. Gibbs, President; R. B. Wilson, Vice President; A. M. Loryea, Dean, and R. Glisan, Treasurer. A committee was appointed to draft by-laws, etc.

A VALUABLE INVENTION.—Mr. B. L. Stone of San Francisco, has recently patented an invention for protecting houses against burglars and sneak thieves, which is at the same time exceedingly ingenious, cheap, and practically useful in those times of midnight prowlers and plunderers. The invention consists of a simple appliance for setting off an alarm bell on a door being opened, the bell being placed in any room in the house which may be most convenient. With this little machine arranged in a house, a burglary is impossible, as the alarm would instantly be given, which would awaken everybody on the premises, and the utmost skill of the burglar would not enable him to open the door without the accompanying alarm. The cost of the machine is from $5 to $10, and it can not only be used from house to house, without trouble, but may be carried around by a traveler and attached in a minute or two to the door of the bedroom he may chance to occupy for the night. The wonder is that a thing so simple remained so long unthought of. Mr. Stone's brother in this city, who furnishes us with the above facts.

CITY TAXES.—We have been requested by City Treasurer Morse to announce that this is the last day for receiving city taxes on the assessment of 1864. The Judiciary Committee of the Council reported an ordinance a few weeks since, which was unanimously adopted by the Board, relative to the collection of delinquent taxes by the City Marshal. We have not the ordinance at hand to refer to, that we may advise our readers of its provisions, as to penalties, and increased per centum for the compensation of the Marshal and cost of collection, but if necessary serve us correctly the tax payers will save some considerable expense by meeting their obligations to the city to day.

SPRING FEVER.—We noticed several persons about the city yesterday laboring under the influences of an attack of spring fever. Dry goods boxes, soft pine fences, chairs, and stools about hotels, and divers and sundry other articles bear the marks of a vigorous application of pocket cutlery, under such circumstances. One man was found in the last stages of the disease, as he was utterly unable to pull his watch out of his own pocket, to answer an inquiry as to time, and referred his friend to some "other inds." A fine shower of rain last evening will probably add a resignation.

TRIAL OF MR. HALL.—Circuit Court was mainly occupied yesterday in the trial of the case of the State vs. C. H. Hall. We are not at liberty to give our opinion, perhaps, upon the point at issue, for fear of "prejudicing" the case, but we may state that we have heard of intelligent gentlemen who would give a prem ium for the privilege of being a fee'd attorney counsel, if for nothing more than the opportunity it would afford them of "combing" one or two of the principal witnesses. Five witnesses were sworn on both sides and the case was continued until this morning.

THEATRE.—The plays at Willamette Theatre last evening, on the occasion of Mr. Waldron's benefit, were witnessed by a large and appreciative audience, as might well be expected under the inducements offered by such an excellent bill, together with the popularity of the beneficiary. To-night will be the last but one of the engagement of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin. The bill is composed of the favorite comedy of "American Cousin," and a beautiful drama.

COMMERCIAL.—The bark Industry, Capt. Lewis, sailed yesterday morning from San Francisco for Portland. Two vessels, supposed to be the Alay and Scranton, were off the mouth of Columbia river bar on Monday. The steamer Pacific expected this evening. Flour has moved considerably yesterday in consequence of a report from the San Francisco market. We quote Imperial Standard, Magnolia and Standard at $11, cash on hand—$9 50@$10 00 per barrel.

THE CONCERT.—We hear of a change in the arrangements for the Mrs. Lenthall's Sabbath School concert and presume it will take place at the hour appointed this evening, at the Church on Taylor street.

Some thirty years ago when alluding to European aristocracy, Edward Everett said

What subsists to day by violence continues to morrow by acquiescence, and is perpetuated by tradition, till at last the hoary abuse shakes the gray hairs of authority at us, and gives itself out as the wisdom of ages; and thus the clearest dictates of reason are unable to yield to a long succession of follies.

Mr. W. Ingalls of Cambridge, Mass., has returned from the mines. Still and all the tax upon Portland is no longer sufficient to pay its way with poverty.

Thomas Sims, the fugitive slave, about whom there was such a row in Boston ten years ago, is now a recruiting agent for colored troops at Nashville.

Telegraphic news was recently announced to be received by express, but it appears that the information was not received by telegraph, but by express. The news was received by telegraph, but the information was not received by telegraph.

The people of Mecklenburg, Germany state that an emigration en masse is going on from the Duchy to America, and that the Landholders are in consequence much alarmed, fearing the emigration will have the effect to raise the price of labor.

The friends of Gen. Grant in Philadelphia have presented his wife with a farm and house that cost $18,000. Gen. Grant is also to be presented by the Philadelphians with a house that cost $10,000 and $20,000 in cash.

The corpse of a woman was found in a room in St. Louis, lately, four months after her death. She had lived alone, and no one had happened to go there regularly. Her business was very small, which may account for the fact. Her pet parrot was found alive and hungry, and had picked the flesh from her face and hands.

The steamer has at last crossed the ocean between Virginia, Liverpool and the words of our telegraphic cable are only. As soon as the snow now covering the ground melts away a party will leave here to examine certain springs supposed to be such as will.

A wicked wag of a lawyer in one of our courts recently undertook to ridicule the beauty of the following quarry to his professional brethren. Why is judge — like necessity? The answer of the learned men and there present quickly answered, because he knows no law.

The Buenos Ayres Standard of October 20, announces that in the Province of San Juan, which is situated about at the foot of the Cordilleras, gold has been discovered in almost incredibly large quantities. Within two days after the discovery was made over four hundred ounces in gold were collected by the local miners, but since then no more has been received from this auriferous region.

During the seven battles, in our troops lay behind their fortifications on James river and the attacking armies of the enemy, a rifle was heard, on the first battle began the patriotic song, "Rally round the flag, boys," and almost in every throat could be heard the

Then up with your hurrah for the burrah
Down with the traitors and up with the stars,
While we rally round the flag, boys, rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.

The Union cheer was given with a will, and the song was encored all along the line.

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters should be in the possession of every body in the morning. As a preventive of sickness they are unsurpassed. Dyspepsia, the gold seeker's trouble, it fears not, for it is sure to subdue it even in a few days. Fever and ague, that scourge of the Mississippi valley, is robbed of its terrors when these Bitters are used. Rheumatism, that twin brother of dyspepsia, yields to its influence. Nervousness, that unconquerable enemy of so many, is mastered by it. Liver complaint, that fruitful source of misery in the tropics, is conquered by it. Indeed, there is no remedy known to the medical profession that is so certain to prevent and cure disease of the stomach, liver and bowels as this. Let no one who is afflicted with any of these complaints neglect to procure it, and let no one who is exposed to them fail to use it. Sold by Druggists and dealers everywhere.

JONATHAN AND HIS BRIDE AT A FASHIONABLE HOTEL.—At one of our fashionable hotels, the other day, among the arrivals was one of the genus verdant—a regular no mistake Jonathan—with eyes wide open at the novelties he met at every turn. He had brought it with him his better half—a strapping flaxen-haired lass, bedecked with a profusion of ribbons and cheap jewelry. They had evidently "come down" to spend the honeymoon, and Jonathan had, no doubt, "darned the expenses."

The first morning after their arrival, the servant was thrown into hysterics by a verdant mistake. Jonathan's bell rang furiously, and he demanded to see the landlord. The functionary having made his appearance, he was hailed with:

"How are you—how de do, old feller? Me and Patience find all right here—room fixed up first rate—gives a feller a high falutin feeling; but I say, old hoss, we want a wash bowl and towel to take off the dust outside, then I'll come down and take a little New England with you."

"Here are all the conveniences for washing, sir," said the landlord, stepping to a mahogany wash sink and raising the lid.

"Gosh all Potomac!" exclaimed our Yankee, "who'd ever thought of that 'ere table's opening on top that way?"

Nothing further occurred until the hour for breakfast, when the verdant couple were seated at the table, and Jonathan having burnt his throat drinking his coffee too hot, and attempting to help himself to an omelette with his fingers, finally had his attention attracted to some fish balls, which are, as everybody knows, fish and potatoes minced together, rolled into balls about the size of an ordinary apple, and cooked brown.

Having procured the dish that contained them, by means of a servant, he helped himself and his partner to one each, and grasped the precious morsel firmly in his hand, opening his capacious jaws, took a bite from his, when suddenly he disgorged the morsel, with an expression of much disappointment, and turning to his bride, exclaimed, "I swow, Patience, these doughnuts are nothin' but cod fish and 'taters."

A PRETTY MOWER IN SAXONY.—At Dresden I saw the Sistine Madonna with inexpressible delight; but I saw another sight, not quite so poetical and ideal, yet still to be looked upon with interest and pleasure. One day I was walking through the public square to the picture gallery. Happened to notice a woman mowing. I stopped; sat down and looked at her for half an hour. She was apparently two or three and twenty. Her head was finely formed, and set firmly on her shoulders. Her hair was neatly braided round it, her features were regular; complexion brown as a berry; eyes bright blue; form vigorous, well rounded like that of Dorothea in Goethe's poem. From her ears hung golden ear-rings. She wore a bright, colored petticoat, reaching a little below the knees; her legs were bare, and her feet encased in embroidered shoes. She was the picture of health, and robust beauty. She swung the scythe with an inimitable ease and grace; and as she did so, there was a placid expression on her pleasant countenance, which spoke of a good conscience, a contented spirit, and a willingness to do the work which her destiny pointed out. I examined the swathe; the grass was cut as smooth as velvet; you could not tell where one swath ended and the next began. An English lawn looked no smoother. It was a work of art, high art; and an American farmer might have taken a useful lesson. I wish I could have taken her portrait as she stood before me.—Prof. Felton.

FRYING.—No one process of cooking is so generally abused as frying. The fry pan has awful sins to answer for. What untold horrors of dyspepsia have arisen from its smoky depths, like the ghosts from witches' cauldrons! The fizzle of frying meat is a warning knell on many an ear, saying, "Touch not, taste not, if you would not burn and writhe!"

Yet those who have traveled abroad remember that some of the lightest, most palatable, and most digestible preparations of meat have come from this dangerous source. But we fancy quite other rites and ceremonies inaugurated the process, and quite other hands performed its offices, than those known to our kitchens. Probably the cotelettes of France are not flopped down into half-melted grease, there gradually to warm and sink and frizzle, while Biddy goes in and out on her other ministrations, till finally, when thoroughly saturated, and dinner hour impends, she bethinks herself, and crowds the fire below to a roaring heat, and finishes the process by a smart burn, involving the kitchen and surrounding precincts in volumes of stygian gloom.

From such a preparation has arisen the very current opinion that fried meats are indigestible. They are indigestible, if they are greasy; but French cooks have taught us that a thing has no more need to be greasy because emerging from grease, than Venus had to be salt because she arose from the sea.

There are two ways of frying employed by the French cook. One is, to immerse the article to be cooked in boiling fat, with an emphasis on the present participle—and the philosophical principle is, to so immediately crisp every pore at the first moment or two of immersion, as effectually to seal the interior against the intrusion of greasy particles; it can then remain as long as may be necessary thoroughly to cook it, without imbibing any more of the boiling fluid than if it were inclosed in an egg shell. The other method is to rub a perfectly smooth iron surface with just enough of oily substance to prevent the meat from adhering, and cook it with quick heat, as cakes are baked on a griddle. In both these cases there must be the most rapid application of heat that can be made without burning, and by the adroitness shown in working out this problem the skill of the cook is tested. Any one whose cook attains this important secret, will find fried things, as digestible, and often more palatable, than any other.—Mrs. Stowe, in Atlantic Monthly.

We are afraid that Young America is not a model in respect to religious observance, and yet with him every day is a fast day.

If an old lady is very feeble and very rich her dutiful relatives are not apt to forget that great age and infirmity entitle one to every possible attention.

The greatest scandal in the world is the world's readiness to believe scandal.
